9 OHIO CHILDREN AND DRIVER KILLED WHEN FAST TRAIN DEMOLISHES SCHOOL BUS AT BEREA

Young County Farmer Found Frozen to Death

MYSTERY ABOUT SUDDEN END OF RAY E. RAMSEY

Body Discovered in Automobile on Pike Near Green Camp Home

OVERCOAT ON RADIATOR

Authorities Believe Death Due to Heart Failure and Over-Exertion

Mystery surrounds the death of Ray E. Ramsey, 25, of the Ray-Un-[illegible] section, seven miles west of Marion, who was found dead in his car [illegible] this morning on a mud road near his home.

Ramsey left last night he left his home with a friend near Big [illegible] when he did not return, his family was not worried, for he had frequently stayed all night at the home of this friend.

This morning about 10 o'clock a motorist on the pike, which is almost parallel to the road, noticed the man in the Ford coupe, and looked in. The body of the young man was stiff and upright, frozen behind the wheel. The family had noticed the car about a half mile from the home, but did not given it much thought.

Coat Over Radiator

Ramsey's coat was wrapped over the radiator of the car, and there were papers under the wheels. It is thought that the radiator had frozen and that he had covered it with his coat to help the thawing. The machine had apparently become stalled in the muddy road and Ramsey probably had worked a long time in an effort to get it out.

Whether or not the fumes from the car killed him, or he froze to death, his death was due to heart failure caused by over-exertion and exposure, it was known. He had gotten in the machine after covering the radiator Monday Wednesday and Tuesday afternoon, the young man and his three brothers, Cecil L. Ramsey, Delbert J. Ramsey, and Clyde R. Ramsey, all of whom live at home, attended a trial in probate court here. The brothers had filed exceptions to a report made by the administrator of the estate of their father, Robert E. Ramsey, who died last March.

Coroner Called

Dr. B. D. Osborn, county coroner, was called to make an investigation this afternoon, after which the body will be moved to the C. E. Curtis funeral home, East Center st.

Ray Chapman and Fred Williams, deputy sheriffs, were called to the scene of Ramsey's death this morning.

MARRIAGE FAKED

Man Arrested on Charge of Deserting 4 Children

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 22—Forest Hull, 30, was held here today for Mercer county, Ohio, authorities, charged with deserting his four small children.

Hull persuaded Lola Tinder, of Indianapolis, to "marry" him. The girl said she did not know he was already married. Police learned that the marriage certificate had never been filled out and that the space for the minister's name was blank. Miss Tinder was a victim of the fake marriage when she was 18 years old. They lived together two years.

FRENCH CROW REAPPOINTED

Congressman Recommends Continuance of Postmaster in Marion Office

HAS SOLONS' APPROVAL

Was Named to Post in 1922 by Late President Warren G. Harding

That French Crow will continue as Marion's postmaster was virtually assured today when it was announced that his reappointment has been recommended by Congressman Grant E. Mouser Jr.

The announcement came from Congressman Mouser's office in Washington. It also stated that the recommendation has the approval of Simeon D. Fess and Roscoe C. McCullough, Ohio's two United States senators.

Appointed in 1922

Crow has been postmaster here since 1922, when he was chosen by virtue of a personal appointment of the late President Harding. According to the statement issued today from Congressman Mouser's office, this was one of the few executive appointments of this kind made by President Harding during his incumbency.

Congressman Mouser reports that he has received numerous indorsements of Crow's administration as postmaster from citizens of Marion as well as many letters of recommendation from the entire Eighth congressional district and from men of prominence in national affairs outside the district.

States His Reasons

In his announcement Congressman Mouser says that he is making the recommendation not only because of Crow's record as postmaster but because he believes that friends of the late President Harding will appreciate continued recognition of his personal friend and appointee.

SMALLPOX END SEEN, ONLY 8 CASES IN CITY

Vaccination Declared To Have Done Much To Halt Spread of Disease

NO DEATHS HERE

Thousands Now Wearing "Health Dimples" as Result of Cooperation

That Marion has decisively passed the epidemic stage, so far as smallpox is concerned was indicated today by the fact that there were but eight cases of the disease under quarantine in this city this morning. This number was reached by several releases made yesterday by Dr. W. J. Weiser, city health commissioner.

A month ago, upwards of 50 Marion homes were under quarantine for smallpox, and with the aid of two nurses and an assistant commissioner, Dr. Weiser was vaccinating school children and factory employes by the hundred.

That this vaccination has done much to prevent further spread of the disease has been pointed out by Dr. Weiser. A number of grade schools here were 100 per cent immune from the disease when health officials finished work at the schools.

Found Year Ago

The first invasion of the city by smallpox is believed by medical men to have arrived here in March, nearly a year ago. A family was placed under quarantine at that time, but not until the exceptionally mild case had exposed several other persons. Although at times there were no cases on city records, doctors believe that there has been smallpox in the city since March.

The extreme mildness of the smallpox here made it virtually impossible for doctors and health authorities to detect all cases. A number of cases was reported in which the afflicted person had such a mild case that he or she continued daily work in spite of the disease.

It was this mildness and practice of many persons not to report cases that led health officials and assistants a merry chase during the last few months.

No Deaths Reported

With the arrival of the present school term in September the situation was enlivened by the outbreak of the disease in school rooms, exposing other students. Pupils were vaccinated by the hundred as authorities attempted to keep pace with the disease.

Several thousand Marionites are wearing "health dimples" or vaccination scars on their arms now to prove they did their share to combat the spread of the disease. This vaccination if a "take" results, protects the vaccinated person for at least seven years, according to doctors.

Marion was unusually fortunate in this mild epidemic, which was more widespread than any since an epidemic here nearly 30 years ago. Not a single death has been attributed to smallpox in the city or county, records show.

CLARA MEETS HARRY

Richman Says They'll Be Married in 3 Weeks, Maybe——

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Clara Bow, the "personality pronoun girl" got in today from Hollywood and fell into the arms of Harry Richman, her announced fiance, who was waiting at the train to meet her.

Harry and Clara posed smiling for the cameraman. Clara had a very bad cold.

"When are you going to marry Harry?" she was asked.

Richman answered the question for her.

"In about two or three weeks. Or maybe longer," he said.

FRANCE PUSHES OWN CLAIMS

Tardieu Indicates 800,000 Tons of Auxiliary Ships Will Be Acceptable

"HOLIDAY" IS LIKELY

Seen as Chief Accomplishment of Naval Conference in London

BY GEORE R. HOLMES
Marion Star Staff Writer

LONDON, Jan. 22—The importance of the French position at the five-power naval disarmament conference was speedily demonstrated today, the first "working day" of the parley.

Although it was announced that the day would be given over to an exchange of "purely personal" views of the chief delegates, as a preliminary to tomorrow's plenary session, it soon became apparent that the French claims, as put forward by chief French delegate, Premier Tardieu, had caused something more than a small flurry throughout conference circles.

Chief of these claims, it was understood, revolved around France's demand for approximately 800,000 tons of auxiliary fighting ships. At a private dinner given last night Premier Tardieu indicated this was the minimum figure acceptable to France, who bases this demand upon her far-flung colonial possessions. Trade routes and lines of communication to these colonial outposts must be protected by French warships, the French delegates declare.

To Push Broad Issues

The fact the Anglo-French delegates lost no time in reaching broad issues of the parley was taken as a significant indication that no time would be lost at the conference in bringing to the fore the phases of disarmament regarded as predominant by all rather than by one or two of the delegations.

International News Service understands that at tomorrow's session, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, chief of the American delegation, will propose in the name of the United States postponement of all battleship replacements until 1936, thus

WAR AGAIN SEEN IN BOLIVIA, PARAGUAY

Paraguayan Charge D'Affaires Says Kundt Ordered Attack on Frontier

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—War loomed again today in the Chaco Boreal between Bolivia and Paraguay, little more than a year after the intervention of the United States and four other nations of the Pan-American Union, according to Pablo M. Ynsfran, Paraguayan charge d'affaires here.

In additional protests since Monday, when he told of a Bolivian attack resulting in the death of a Paraguayan soldier late last week, Ynsfran told Assistant Secretary of State Francis White, in charge of Latin-American affairs, that the Bolivian general, Kundt, commander of the Bolivian army, had ordered a general attack on the Paraguayan frontier.

Thus far the Bolivians have made no counter charges to the state department.

Canton Man Held to Grand Jury on Mail Fraud Charge

CANTON, Jan. 22—Bert Whitson, general manager of the Klein-Heffelman-Zollers Co., Canton, was held for the federal grand jury under $5,000 bond today following his plea of not guilty yesterday to charges of using the mail to defraud the company of merchandise valued at approximately $10,000.

Whitson is alleged to have purchased merchandise in the name of the company and ordered it shipped to a New York warehouse in the name of his mother and others, after which he would mail false invoices to the head of his company.

Liquor Ring Jealousies Are Blamed for Death of Man

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22—Liquor ring jealousies were blamed by police here today for the slaying last midnight of Charles (Chuck) O'Neil, 31, reputed bootlegger.

O'Neil was "put on the spot" in his home as he sat drinking with his wife and Morrish Asher shortly after they had returned from a movie, police said. Asher, who had just recently been released from prison where he served a term for burglary, fled during the shooting.

SET MAY 19 AS START OF NEXT FUND CAMPAIGN

First Year's Operation of Community Service Seen as Highly Successful

EXTRA MONEY FOR CHARITY

Executive Committee Able To Step in Now and Give Aid to Needy

Marion's second annual Community Fund campaign will take place the week of May 19, according to arrangements made last night at a meeting of the fund's executive committee held at the Marion club.

A record of successful operations during the first year is expected to result in virtually unanimous support from the citizens in raising the amount needed to continue welfare and charity work here on an efficient cooperative basis.

This was indicated at last night's meeting when a review of the fund's service up to this time and a forecast for the rest of the fund year showed that the new charity system has been an unquestioned success.

Eliminates Duplication

Reports from all of the various charity and welfare agencies and organizations whose activities have been coordinated and systematized under the fund plan show that this community service is now being performed much more thoroughly and effectively than ever before in the city's history.

Duplication and conflictions of activities which formerly existed among the various organizations have been supplanted by a concentration of service under one head, with the result that many more of the city's worthy poor are benefited at a minimum of cost.

As the result of the fund's existence, money for charity is now available when it is needed. That has proven to be one of the greatest advantages, those identified with operation of the new system say. In the past when an emergency arose, calling for prompt relief, there was no effectual way of handling the problem.

Appropriates Extra Funds

As an example of the Community Fund's value in this respect, the executive committee last night decided to provide the various agencies with funds necessary to extend additional aid to families now handicapped by undesired unemployment conditions. This money was available from a portion of the Com-

FRANK BECK HURT WHEN AUTO SKIDS

Extent of Injuries Not Determined at City Hospital Today

The extent of injuries sustained by Frank Beck, Girard av., in a head-on automobile collision at 5:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon near the Prospect st. and Marion av., intersections had not been determined at noon today.

Beck, last in a line of four cars, attempted to pass them, going north on Prospect st. Seeing that he would not pass the line of cars without colliding with another machine coming from the north, he jammed on the brakes of the Studebaker coupe he was driving.

The car slid on the icy pavement and crashed head-on into a Pontiac coach, driven by O. C. Ice. The two cars were demolished. Mr. Ice, teacher at Central Junior High school, sustained a slight bruise on his nose and an injury to his arm.

Information given out on Mr. Beck's condition showed that he did not regain consciousness until about 11 o'clock last night at City hospital, where he was taken in the W. C. Boyd ambulance. He sustained a deep gash at the back of his neck and a cut on the side of his head. His condition was reported from the hospital as fair.

Mr. Beck is a salesman for the Dodge garage, North Prospect st.

MacDonald Says Skyscraper Will Blot Out Humanity

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22—Skyscrapers in time are going to blot out humanity, if we are not careful, Alister MacDonald, 23-year-old son of England's prime minister, said here yesterday in a talk to members of Cleveland's Building Exchange and Institute of Architects.

MacDonald, who is an architect by profession, is traveling the United States studying American structure. He arrived in Chicago last night.

CENTRAL STATES HIT BY NEW ZERO WAVE

Blizzards Sweep Through District, Tying Up Traffic; Two Deaths Reported from Extreme Cold

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—Blizzards and below zero temperatures were common throughout the central states today as winter sent its second severe cold wave of the past week, out of the Canadian northwest.

The frigid wave sent temperatures tumbling from the Rocky mountains on the west to the Atlantic seaboard in the east.

Northwestern Colorado reported temperatures ranging from 35 degrees below zero to 52 degrees below. Parts of Wyoming suffered temperatures which fell as low as 55 degrees below zero.

Heavy snows in the mountain states repeated the traffic items of Friday's storm. A blizzard which gripped Oklahoma succeeded in stalling a St. Louis-San Francisco train near Mustang, Okla. Seventy-five passengers, including Governor Holloway of Oklahoma, are held prisoners in the train.

The northern states of Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana are once more suffering in temperatures ranging from 22 below to 40 below.

In Chicago the mercury descended one degree an hour during the night, hovering at the six below zero mark at dawn. In the Chicago area, Milwaukee with a temperature of ten degrees below zero was the coldest spot.

Two deaths were attributed to the cold wave here yesterday when Steven Franciscowlow, 70, was found frozen to death after he wandered from his home only partially clothed.

Mrs. Tobie Brown was found dead in a chair beside a stove in her home.

TRUCK DRIVEN ONTO TRACKS IN FLYER PATH

Waits for Two Trains To Pass, Then Starts, Hit by Third

EIGHT DIE INSTANTLY

12-Year-Old Girl Is Only Survivor of Bus Accident

BEREA, Jan. 22—Nine school children and a bus driver were killed here today when the Brookpark school bus was rammed and demolished by a fast New York Central mail and passenger train.

Seven of the children and the driver were killed instantly.

The bus approached the tracks from the south on Sheldon rd. Taylor, the driver, stopped and two trains, one traveling east and the other west, crossed the intersection. After they had passed, Taylor started across and the third train, the fast New York Central Limited, struck the bus a terrific impact, overturning it and scattering wreckage on either side of the tracks.

THE DEAD:

Charles Taylor, driver.
William Davidson, 11.
Verlon Davidson, 7.
Jacob Waller, Jr., 12.
Jeanette Waller, 9.
Rita Zielinski, 9.
Vincent Zielinski, 6.
Dorothy Zielinski, 10.
William Pasturech, 9.
Evelyn Rottmiluch, 7.

THE INJURED:

Ethel Davidson, 12, in Berea Community hospital.

Only one survivor, Ethel Davidson, 12-year-old, remains of the 11 occupants of the school bus.

Crew Doesn't See Bus

The engineer of the train was John Hand of Toledo. He told Trainmaster A. H. Hancock of Elyria, when the flyer stopped there after the crash that neither he, nor the fireman on the train saw the approaching bus. He said the train was traveling at the rate of about 45 miles an hour.

There is an incline at that point or the train would have been doing in excess of 60 miles per hour, Hand said. The train was enroute to Toledo and Chicago.

After a preliminary and cursory examination by officials and observers, seven of the children's bodies were removed to funeral establishments in Berea. Three other children were taken to Berea Community hospital where two of them died shortly after arrival.

Undertaker Identifies Kin

The only identification thus far was made by H. C. Haug, owner of the undertaking parlors. His nephew and niece, Jake Walter, 12, and his sister, Juanita, 9, were among those reported to Haug's funeral establishment.

According to observers of the crash, both the driver and the engineer of the train had an unobstructed view of the approaching bus. The scene of the crash is a rural, unguarded crossing just east of the city limits of Berea.

Sheldon rd., running in a north and south direction crosses the tracks just east of the main highway from Cleveland to Berea. Eye-witnesses of

All About Desert Alfalfa
Skip, If Not Interested
Farming in Philanthropy
Coyotes and Rabbits Walk

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

LODGE, Cal., Jan. 22 — Farmers in the East might be interested in desert alfalfa farming. This is written on the writer's own ranch, sixty miles east of the Pacific, 2,000 feet above sea level, beside the Santa Fe railroad on the Mohave desert.

You dig a well, instead of driving one. That gives work to homesteaders, and makes a better job. The well, eight feet in diameter, is 100 feet deep, lined with concrete rings, dropped down, one above the other, as the digging progresses. Plenty of water only fifty feet down, but you go fifty feet deeper for enough to install a forty-horsepower electric pump.

The pump throws 60,000 gallons an hour to a concrete reservoir 180 feet above the bottom of the well, thence the water flows over the alfalfa ranch by gravity, 500 pounds of water for a ton of alfalfa.

The alfalfa from six to eight cuttings a year, depending on the season's sunshine. Good sunshine ripens a crop in twenty-one days.

Nothing is sold in March. Average season yields seven tons to the acre. Average price for good green alfalfa in the spring, $24 a ton, and more if you can afford to store and keep it.

Two trucks from Los Angeles have driven away eight tons, payment in cash. On the ranch, inside a fenced galvanized iron storage shed, the alfalfa, in bales, is as green as the day it was cut.

The green leaves and blue flowers cling to the stem, which contains the value. That high protein is fed to rabbits, whose meat produce 22 different kinds of delicious alfalfa young, never letting it go to seed, saves the energy of the plant.

The average gross yield of 50 good alfalfa acres should be not less than $6,000. Do not, however, try desert farming, even on this wonderful desert, unless you are prepared to spend plenty of money or work very hard, and wait.

Grading, seeding, well digging, pump installing, irrigating, especially on a small scale, are costly.

Electric current eats one quarter of your gross receipts, although you can overcome that, producing your own current with a Diesel engine, if you can utilize a 40-horsepower or more. Co-operative farming here could be made to pay, a dozen real workers combining, working together.

This writer proposed to test the matter by planting an experimental square mile of alfalfa, having tried the preliminary 50-acre patch. Further news about that in due time. At best, all farming should be classified as a form of philanthropy, not as a business.

Above all, buy no desert or any other land by mail, or on promises.

There is abundant water on this ranch because the submerged Mohave river flows close by, rising to the surface in the rainy season. There is no proof that water in irrigation quantities can be found on this desert, except close to the river.

Schemers have sold desert acres to gullible buyers that will never dig to water. Many homesteaders break their hearts digging for water that is never reached.

IT is suggested to President Hoover that the government, in allotting

U. B. DEFEATS PRESBYTERIAN FIVE

HOLDOUTS LED BY RUTH

Babe Probably Will Compromise on $80,000 After Traditional Stall

BY FRANK G. MENKE

HO, hum!

Babe Ruth's a holdout!

Or, as the Yankee owners view it, he's a holder-up.

In view of the fact that G. Herman hasn't been a holdout or a holder-up for nigh into three years, due to the fact that he had a three year contract during those identical three years, Babe deserves to have something written about the recurrence of an ailment from which the old "Bust 'em Man" has suffered spasmodically through a decade with the Yankees.

When G. Herman started operations in behalf of the Yankees in 1920, his annual wages were $10,000 on a holdover contract from the Red Sox. G. Herman promptly earned himself a raise to $20,000 for 1921 by pasting forth 54 homers during 1920.

BUT, of course G. Herman didn't sign immediately—not for a paltry $20,000. He contracted a very bad rash of holdoutitis before he decided that $20,000 was fairly large money much more than he could get for pitching hay or shoeing horses.

Well, the 1921 season came to its end and there was G. Herman proudly displaying a mark of 59 homers and holding out for $75,000 per annum—"and cheap at double the price!"

In due course of time Babe, having made so many motions one way and the Yankee bosses having done their calisthenics in the opposite direction, G. Herman was cured of holdoutitis with a five-year contract calling for $52,000 per year.

THAT document contracted rigor mortis at the end of 1926 and, of course G. Herman opined that for about $100,000 each year until along in 1935 or 1950 he might be influenced to sign a contract to labor in behalf of the Yankees. Otherwise, alas, alas, he would cease being benefactor for baseball manufacturers by losing a carload of them each season, and he would have to turn his back upon baseball and go in for banking, diamond cutting or accept an offer to become King of Albania.

After learning how difficult it is to become King of Albania and likewise discovering that you can't use a bat in cutting diamonds or loaning money, G. Herman decided that $70,000 per year, under a three year contract, wasn't so bad after all.

And so he signed for 1927, 1928 and 1929.

THIS is 1930.

Contract time arrived

"What I would like," groaned G. Herman to his bosses, "is $85,000 per year for three years."

"What you'll get," was the snappy retort, "is $75,000 for two years."

"Not me!" scoffed G. Herman.

"Bon Voyage!" carolled the bosses.

And so G. Herman took a rattler for Florida and, of course, announced to the world that once again he is a holdout. And so the Bam is. But it won't be for long. They'll compromise.

The conditions undoubtedly will be a two year contract at $80,000 per year.

THE Senior division of the Marion county Sunday School league was rocked to its very foundation last night and today there is only one defeated quintet fighting its way out of the wreckage.

Waldo is alone at the top of the standings after one of the greatest upsets of the season in which the lowly United Brethren cagers won their first game by giving the Presbyterians their initial setback of the season 31 to 19.

Vanderhoff and Romine played the leading role in the U. B. victory. Vanderhoff scored 11 points while Romine slipped through for five baskets. Between them they scored more than enough to defeat the Presbyterians.

It was a great battle in the first half. The winners led by a margin of five points as the period closed. The Presbyterian defense flopped in the final half and its scoring also suffered. Hite, with eight points, was the scoring ace for the losing team.

Calvary continued to hold its place in the cellar after dropping its fourth straight to Epworth, 31 to 20. Calvary led at the halfway mark, 11 to 13, but was unable to spike Epworth's long range guns in the closing session. Jones counted 11 points for the winners.

In the battle of the Christians, the first team went into a tie for second place with Presbyterian by defeating the second aggregation, 35 to 22. Geissler and John and Vic Gillis were the stars for the victors.

Waldo had a narrow escape from defeat but managed to retain its clean slate by beating Trinity Baptist, 19 to 17, behind the scoring of the two Strines. Yazel was the high point man for Trinity with nine counters.

The Intermediate league race simmered down to the Presbyterians and Christians today after Trinity and Calvary were beaten last night.

Trinity lost to the Presbyterians, 19 to 17 while Epworth No. 1 struck a death blow at the hopes of Calvary, 26 to 9. In the other game Christian walked away with Epworth No. 2, 38 to 8.

Big Bill Hartwell Is Defeated by De Kub

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Big Bill Hartwell, Kansas City heavyweight, was just one of the boys again today, following his kayo in the ninth round here last night at the hands of Arthur DeKuh, great Indian. The referee stopped the bout after Hartwell became defenseless. His left eye had been closed tight and his right eye was battered badly.

The Kansas City boxer showed more gameness than ability and De Kuh, despite his victory, was judged merely an ordinary performer.

Zuppke and Allen Will Head Coaching School

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 22 — Bob Zuppke from the cornfields of Illinois where he teaches championship football, and "Phog" Allen from windy Kansas, ought to make a great team at Wittenberg College for two weeks this summer. They will teach at the Fourth Annual Summer coaching school. "Zupp" will talk and demonstrate football and Dr. Allen will talk championship basketball, and a lot of anatomy.

John Clark's Team Wins First Round Ball Title

The first round championship of the Business Men's Volleyball league today is held by the team headed by John Clark. Clark's team last night won the playoff contest from Robert Heminger's aggregation, 32 to 21. At the end of the round the two teams were tied for first place.

ITALIAN WRESTLER WINS

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Gino Garibaldi, Italian wrestling heavyweight, was looking for new American opponents today, following his victory over Tony Rocco of New York last night.

Men formerly wore as many furs as the women, but they found they could keep warm without them, so now furs are ornamental.

Defiance College Five Down Ohio State "B's"

DEFIANCE, Jan. 22—In a basketball contest replete with thrills, here last night, Ohio State's "B" five fought a game uphill battle after trailing Defiance at the half, 16 to 8, before the count at 24-all. With only a few minutes of play left, before the final gun, Gear, Defiance center, and his teammate, Bowers, guard, came through with field goals, which gave their team victory, by a 28 to 24 margin.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

At New York—Arthur Dekuh, Indian heavyweight, scored technical knock over Big Bill Hartwell, Kansas City (9).

At Jacksonville, Fla.—Ernie Signes, Chilean middleweight, defeated Bobby Hart, Portland, Ore.

At Flint, Mich.—Matt Flannigan, Denver welterweight, defeated Mel Tapton, Flint, (10).

At Greenville, Miss.—Chico Cisneros, Little Rock featherweight, scored technical knockover Long Sing Luy, New York Chinese (7).

At West Palm Beach—Dwight Pyler, Little Rock welterweight, won on technical knockout over Cyclone Jimmy Smith, New York (10).

At San Francisco—Jack Lewis, San Francisco heavyweight, knocked out Tillie Taverna, Sacramento (1).

At Denver—George Manley, Denver light heavyweight, won a 10-round decision over Young Firpo, Boise, Ida.

BLAME TRAINING FOR AILMENT OF TUNNEY

Experts Say Champion Did Not Drink Enough Water During Workouts

NEW YORK, Jan. —Eugene J. Tunney, as he once signed himself in a moment of stress, announced on a certain poignant occasion a year and a half ago that he was through with boxing and all of its works and pomps. This was important, if true. More important, however, is the fact that boxing apparently wasn't through with him. The sport is a jealous tyrant. It resents anything like the implied slight of voluntary retirement and proceeds to exact its reprisals.

Tunney, the boxer, before the public, was a model of health, whereas Tunney, the private citizen, has just emerged from a hospital where he underwent a delicate operation on his kidneys.

The fault, according to Artie McGovern, the private conditioner of Ruth, Farrell, Sarazen and other athletes, isn't primarily boxing's. It is found, it seems, in the mode of training of the boxer himself.

Lack Water

Too much perspiration; too little water drinking, is McGovern's succinct way of expressing himself on this point. He says the result is that water passes through the skin, instead of the kidneys, which thereupon resort to their lack of irrigation by forming oxylate crystals which ultimately form a stone so hard that it cannot be broken with a rock crusher. It was such a stone that recently was removed from Tunney's system.

"Every man who goes in for violent athletics is subject to this reaction," the trainer declares. "Tennis and football players, among others, naturally perspire freely and are prevented from drinking a compensative amount of water on their days of competition because that would make them logy, if not actually ill. The boxer, however, is in an even more precarious position.

"He must watch his weight and so he is prevented from drinking too freely, either since water is the great fat fattener we know. He can't drink, either, at any old hour, as can other athletes. He would, for instance, drink almost nothing before he went on the road in the morning and, before his afternoon's workout in the ring, water again is prohibited. Meanwhile, he has sweated prodigously on the road in the morning and in the ring in the afternoon.

Kidneys Cheated

"The kidneys thus are cheated and their rejoinder is not long in coming, sometimes only a year or two, sometimes longer. The remedy? There is only one. The boxer and the athlete in general must diet with his water drinking at regular hours the same as he does with his food. He must set aside a time in the morning, when he has cooled out from his run on the road, for a ritual of water drinking, to make up for the loss of water that has escaped through his pores. Later, perhaps in the evening, he should drink a stated quantity of water to balance that which was lost in the training ring.

"His 'drying out' before the fight, of course, is a condition that cannot be altered. Its effect can be considerably lessened, however, if the kidneys can be primed to withstand the unusual strain. As it is, the thing is just plain murder—and I mean that almost literally."

Devoe paints, varnishes and finishes for every purpose.

SCHMELING TO MEET WINNER ON JUNE 26

Arrangements Completed for Heavyweight Titular Fight in New York; Sharkey or Scott To Be Opponent

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Max Schmeling and the winner of the Sharkey-Scott fight at Miami will meet for the heavyweight championship of the world at the Yankee stadium on June 26, with the local milk fund and Madison Square Garden as co-promoters. This isn't news. Its second-or-even-scarcer than news-angle aren't in the least prints of it, then. It's fact.

It isn't news because Schmeling, Sharkey, and Scott, their managers, the milk fund people and Madison Square Garden have known it these many weeks. Among those who didn't know it were the lads who were wondering what they were going to use for money when the time came to pay Schmeling $_50,000 for dawdling with some comedian at Atlantic City on March 31. This one seemed due for a rude jolt by either party or both, so Mr. Joe Jacobs, who manages Schmeling any time the latter doesn't catch him at it, decided to pump the gas before it went off by mistake and get somebody on purpose.

As a matter of fact, there's one thing to be said for Jacobs. He may start something too soon; he never stops it too late. He knows when to quit. They say it would have been worth Jacobs' job if Schmeling got back here to find that his first big fight was to be with a lot of promoters over the question of whether they meant dollars or were talking about the population when they said 250,000.

To give them their due, they meant dollars, if Sharkey was to be in the other corner, and dish towels, if the opposition was to go with the party. They can't get Sharkey. He tied up with the Garden recently. So did Scott. Therefore, Jacobs' run out yesterday wasn't a tragedy. It should have been $250,000 worth of relief. It must be a terrible strain, worrying about something you know you won't do.

They will are talking today of going after the Sharkey-Scott winner and thus holding Schmeling to contract but it's no use. Now are the Miami principals come to the milk fund program but Schmeling himself. His Mr. Jacobs agreed to terms a month ago, just way of showing that, of all the box men in the world, he liked himself best.

One of the "conveniences" in transaction included the promise the milk fund promoters to have houses removed from Herr Schmeling's brow by the local commission. The promise was promptly fulfilled fact that the commission tacitly mitted some weeks ago when it Herr Schmeling 60 days to the Sharkey-Scott winner for fight.

When the time comes, this take 60 minutes.

Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—Commission house buying and short covering advanced local wheat prices at the close yesterday, after the market had drifted quietly in practically the same narrow range as the previous day. News was not impressive, but foreign markets were firm and a fair export demand was in evidence.

Coarse grains and rye also held to a narrow range and continued to take their price movement incentive from wheat. Corn advanced with wheat, but there was some bearish feeling over a quieter cash demand.

At the close, wheat prices were 1⅛@1⅜c higher. Corn was ⅛@⅜c up; oats unchanged to ⅜c higher, and rye, ⅛c higher to ⅜c lower. Winnipeg wheat futures closed ⅝@1¼c higher, and Liverpool advanced ⅜@⅝d. Buenos Aires was firm and higher.

Pressure Withdrawn

Volume of wheat purchasing was not impressive in the late market, but the selling pressure around $1.28 for the May which has been in evidence the last two days appeared to have been lifted. Commission house buying and short covering advanced prices easily.

A strong Argentine wheat market for the last two days was ascribed by cables to a decrease in the movement in that country. This had a beneficial effect on Liverpool prices, which also reflected a better consumptive demand abroad and improved flour trade.

Late export advices referred to sales of 640,000 bu. of Winters at the Gulf. Previous reports spoke of 400,000 bu. sold mainly Manitobas, and a better tone to cables. Some of the late pit buying was by a house with export connections.

Co-ops Lay Plans

Activities of the co-operatives in advancing plans for grain stabilization corporations to be operated under the sponsorship of the Farm Board was stressed in Washington dispatches. Two grain committees have already been appointed, but the personnel has not been revealed.

No direct effect of this report on the market was in evidence, but it appeared to create some bearish sentiment in as much as the announced purpose of the stabilization corporations is the ultimate elimination of grain futures trading under the co-operative marketing plan.

Trade in corn continued mainly local, with prices following the trend in wheat. Country offerings were still small. While choice grades of corn met with an excellent demand, cash handlers spoke of less snap to the demand for the ordinary run. The basis was unchanged to 1c easier, with poor grades showing the weakness. Shipping demand was dull.

Cars of grain received and inspected: Wheat, 11; corn, 137; oats, 30; rye, 2; and barley, 5.

52 Families Flee Apartment With Mercury at 6 Below

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—Fifty-two families were forced to flee to the street in their night clothing with the mercury six below zero when fire attacked an apartment building here just before dawn today.

As the blaze started just under the roof no one was seriously endangered in making their escape. Emergency shelter in nearby homes was provided for everyone.

Contentment may come when one grows tired of struggling.

CHURCH UNIFICATION BEFORE CONVENTION

United Protestant Group Is Goal of Leaders at Pentecostal Session

COLUMBUS, Jan. 22—Further consideration of a proposed consolidation of all Protestant churches was given today by prominent pastors and laymen, who are attending the centennial pentecostal celebration which is being held here this week.

Organization of interdenominational unity would be comparatively easy, according to James Endicott, former moderator of the United church of Canada, who addressed delegates to the first meeting of the Ohio Laymen's convention which is a part of the centennial.

Endicott, who was a young preacher in the more remote provinces of the northwest several decades ago, described the development of the united church idea in Canada. The process which will bring about international unity is a slow one and must be followed cautiously, Endicott told his audience.

A proposal of a merger of the Ohio Council of Churches and the Ohio Council of Religious Education was made at yesterday's general meeting. The proposal is being met with enthusiasm by all delegates and looms as a possibility within a short time.

CITY DECORATED BY CRYSTALIZED SNOW

Unusual Atmospheric Conditions Bring Out Rare White Mantle

Nature decorated Marion in a special setting early this morning with a covering of crystalized snow that was described by early risers as being one of the most beautiful ever witnessed here.

This form of snow decoration is said to be a rare occurrence, not being seen here more than a few times in the last quarter of a century.

Unusual atmospheric conditions, generally including a foggy air are said to cause the forming of snow crystals. The decorations were most brilliant and noticeable about 6 o'clock this morning. At that time, according to persons who viewed the scene, crystals that in some instances measured a foot in length covered limbs of trees, wires and other places where the glint of the white mantle was most noticeable.

There is an alabaster mine in Italy that has been worked continuously since it was opened by the Etruscans more than 2,000 years ago.

FRANCE IS PUSHING ITS OWN CLAIMS

Tardieu Indicates 800,000 Tons of Auxiliary Ships Will Be Acceptable

giving the conference something tangible to chew on.

This proposal being accepted in principle by the British and Japanese, which are the only powers concerned, it is estimated this naval building "holiday" will save the trio of naval powers approximately $2,000,000,000 during the next six years.

Holiday Seen as Result

In the opinion of many qualified observers, this "holiday" compromises the chief ultimate accomplishment of the conference, for France has already made it emphatically clear that she does not intend to accept drastic limitation of her naval auxiliaries.

France's position, particularly her claim for an 800,000 ton allotment for all auxiliaries, was strongly presented to the British and American delegates by Premier Andre Tardieu and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand at a private dinner at the London home of Keith Merrill last night, attended by Secretary Stimson, Dwight W. Morrow, Premier Ramsay MacDonald and British Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson.

Premier Tardieu's position is regarded as exceedingly strong as France's financial situation is excellent, having a gold reservoir second only to that of the United States and colonial possessions second only to those of Great Britain. Furthermore, he is supported by almost unanimous public opinion at home, which favors definite improvement of the French naval position.

There is no pacifist, utter disarmament sentiment in France comparable to what both Secretary Stimson and Premier MacDonald have.

Not To Abolish Battleships

It can be stated in strongest terms that battleships will not be abolished here, although eventual abolition will be discussed academically and idealistically the same as eventual utter disarmament has been and will be discussed.

One delegate informed International News Service somewhat irritably when discussing the battleship question:

"You can state positively that the American delegation will do nothing here to impair the relative efficiency of the American fleet."

This same authority said that the United States is willing to consider reduction in the size of battleships to 28,500 tons but no lower and it is understood that the naval experts opposed this step.

The Americans consider that much of the agitation the British are kicking up over battleships is for political consumption, as the admiralty "greybeard" are as much wedded to battleships as the American general board.

Exchange Calls

When it is remembered that France and Japan are demanding almost parity in auxiliaries, it is readily seen that the American and British battleships may represent the practicable margin of their naval superiority.

All day long the delegates were busy exchanging calls.

Colonel Stimson saw Premier MacDonald at Downing st. at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon. Later the secretary of state held a consultation with former Premier Wakatsuki of Japan.

During the afternoon, Ambassador Dawes and Senators Reed and Robinson visited the Japanese delegates.

Later this afternoon, Premier MacDonald was to receive Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy in the house of commons. The premier was to receive Mr. Wakatsuki at Downing st. tonight.

WOMAN FALLS 15 FEET

TOLEDO, Jan. 22—Mrs. Ella Barlach, 44, is in East Side hospital here today with a fractured skull and a broken right arm as the result of a 15-foot fall from the second floor of her home late yesterday. Mrs. Berlach, according to witnesses, was leaning over the banister of the stairway, talking to a neighbor, when she slipped and fell.

A big round, white and noble forehead is sometimes a false front.

Brother of Marion Men Is Claimed in Fostoria

Elmer Ohls, 49, of Fostoria, brother of Harry Ohls, of Ohl's Hatchery, north of the city, and Charles Ohls, of Ohl's Decorating Co., South Main st., died at 2 o'clock this morning at his home in Fostoria.

Mr. Ohls was seriously burned while working on his automobile 10 days ago, and the burns, with complications, caused his death. About 10 years ago, he was a partner with his two brothers in the decorating store.

His widow and four children survive. Funeral services probably will be held Friday.

9 OHIO CHILDREN, DRIVER ARE KILLED

Fast Train Demolishes School Bus at Crossing in Berea

the crash reported that just prior to the accident they had noticed that the windows of the bus were almost entirely covered with frost.

Bodies Mangled

A scant minute later the noise of the crash and the screaming of train brakes brought numerous motorists traveling the main road to the scene.

Debris of the demolished bus and mangled bodies of the children were scattered along the tracks for a distance of more than 500 yards. In the cases of the dead, the bodies were mangled almost beyond recognition.

Immediately after the crash, teachers at Brookpark school notified of the accident, hurried to the homes of the children to notify the parents.

Then began a frantic trek from the little Brookpark village to the Berea mortuaries and hospital. Identification was difficult and heart-rending in almost each case the dead were brothers and sisters.

Begin To Identify Dead

Jacob and Juanetta Walters were the first identified. Their mangled bodies were taken unknowingly to the undertaking parlors of E. C. Haag, an uncle of the dead children.

Shortly afterward, a teacher, Miss Margaret Fisher, identified the Davidson lads. They were pupils of hers.

The three fatalities in the Zielinski family, Rita, Vincent and Dorothy, were identified by their hysterical mother. William Pastoreck's body was also claimed by his heart-broken mother.

In all cases, officials reported, the dead children were almost decapitated. In every case the skull was taken off just above the ears.

The bus was accustomed to make three trips from the homes to the school, and consequently checking the victims was not as difficult as was first anticipated. With the first news of the crash, teachers of the school obtained a list of the pupils scheduled for that particular trip and hurriedly made trips to the homes to notify parents.

Tells of Horrors

Arch Dunn of Berea, was one of the early arrivals on the scene of the ghastly tragedy.

"It was a horrible nightmare," Dunn said. "The bodies of those poor children were scattered along the tracks and tangled up in the wreckage. It was awful. Some of the children were wedged so tightly in the wreckage that it was almost impossible to extricate them.

"All of the children were unconscious and blood-spattered so that it was hard to tell which ones were dead. As fast as we could, we got the children free from the wreckage and rushed them to a hospital in Berea."

Nineteen persons, all except three of them school children, have been killed in three bus crashes in Ohio during the first 22 days of 1930.

The first crash occurred Jan. 2 at Eaton, where two persons met death when an Interstate bus swerved off the road and plunged into the ditch.

Seven school children were killed and nine were seriously injured when their bus crashed into a train at a crossing near Shreve, Jan. 3.

The most tragic accident occurred today near Berea, when nine school children and the driver were instantly killed. Their bus was struck by a fast New York Central passenger train. One other child was injured.

The Berea tragedy occurred, strangely enough, just a year to the day after the horrible bus crash at Bellevue, O., where 21 persons were killed when an electric train rammed into a passenger bus.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 22—"We must put a stop to the tragic loss of life, due to wanton carelessness," declared Gov. Myers Y. Cooper this afternoon in a communication to Dr. John L. Clifton, state director of education.

The governor directed Clifton to "set up a program of safety for the boards of education and, under your authority, issue such instructions to all school boards in Ohio which transport children to and from school."

After conferring with the governor, members of the state utilities commission announced that they have arranged for a thorough investigation of the Berea bus accident, marked by the tragic death of nine school children and the driver of a school bus, this morning.

Ira Sprankle, superintendent of the utilities commission's department of investigation, and Louis Dabe, one of the commission's inspecters, were to leave here this afternoon for Berea to participate in the probe.

Sent to Scene

Upon instructions from the commission, Harry Evans, chief of the commission's railroad inspection bureau, and J. T. Briggs, another inspector for the commission, were sent to the scene of the accident.

"Word has just reached the governor's office of another serious school bus accident, snuffing out the lives of nine school children and the driver, at Berea, Ohio," Governor Cooper wrote Director Clifton.

"This is the second terrible tragedy of its kind that has occurred in the last 30 days. It is evident that these accidents were avoidable, if proper precautions had been taken.

"It appears that regulatory authority over school buses is not vested in the public utilities commission. The commission has authority however, and has issued an order to railroads requiring proper safeguarding signals covering dangerous crossings. The regulation of bus drivers is vested solely in the local boards of education."

munity Fund not taken up by the appropriations originally made for the various welfare organizations.

An expression of the general opinion which prevails among the civic and relief organizations grouped in the Community Fund came at the meeting last night from Mrs. John T. McNamara, president of the County Federation of Women's clubs.

In a talk given to the executive committee, Mrs. McNamara designated the Community Fund as one of the most notable and effective projects ever launched in behalf of public welfare here. Basing her opinion on her experience with charity work both before and after inauguration of the fund, she said that under the new plan this community service is reaching the utmost in effectiveness.

Safety Director Pledges Aid

T. E. Sommandine, the city's new director of public safety, was present and assured the committee that he will be pleased to assist in having the city cooperate with the Community Fund service. He said that the fund plan will be worked out later, the intention being to follow virtually the same budget and organization plan used in the first campaign last year.

ing. Chapman expressed the opinion at noon that death came from heart failure, due to over-exertion and exposure.

MEETING OF PYTHIAN LODGE OPENS TODAY

Vote Cast for Officers of Grand Lodge Being Counted

Representatives of the Ohio Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, were in session at the local Pythian hall on East Center st. today, to make an official count of the vote cast for next year's grand lodge officers and transact other business of the state organization. The meeting is in charge of Judge Charles L. Justice, of Marion, grand chancellor.

The count includes ballots cast by past chancellors of the 504 Knights of Pythias lodges of Ohio. Only past chancellors are eligible to vote for grand lodge officers.

The visitors and a number of locals lodge members were entertained at noon with a dinner served by the women of Canby Temple, Pythian Sisters.

Following completion of the vote count this afternoon, grand lodge officers recently promoted for the rest of this year were to be installed. Meetings of the grand lodge relief and legislative committees were also scheduled for afternoon.

Thirty-five were present at the dinner served at noon.

MODERN HARPS WILL BE USED IN CONCERT

Zimmer Harp Trio Will Appear at Central Junior Auditorium Jan. 24

The Zimmer Harp trio, assisted by Harry Newcombe, dramatic baritone, giving a concert at Central Junior High school auditorium, Jan.

24, will bring with them three of the most modern as well as the most expensive of all musical instruments.

The instrument somewhat resembles the one used in Egypt centuries ago, but its most modern perfection is the result of a development that has extended through the ages.

The Zimmer Harp Trio, Nellie Zimmer, solo harpist; Marie Mellman, harpist, and Louise Harris, harpist and pianist, will present a program from the limited harp library that answers all your expectations from the harp. Musical enjoyment to a great extent is dependent on the ease of which it can be assimilated.

The trio was organized by Nellie Zimmer several years ago and was the first harp trio to tour the United States presenting a program assisted by a vocalist, harp solos, duos and trios. In March 1926 Miss Zimmer presented the Zimmer Harp Trio, long famous for their annual tours, to New York critics and an audience in concert in the Aeolian Hall. The critics were unanimous in their praise both of Miss Zimmer as soloist and the trio as a unique offering of the concert world.

Transfer of Prohibition Holds Stage in Capital

Only Recommendation of President Hoover To Strengthen Enforcement To Be Given Consideration by Congress; Mellon Indorses Transfer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—The ... transfer of the government's ... enforcement army, 25,000 ... the treasury to the department of justice held the stage ... wet and dry war on ...

... of the Treasury Mellon ... the house committee on ... expenditures this morning ... to indorse the transfer. He was to be followed by Attorney General William D. Mitchell. Both Mellon and Mitchell have agreed the prohibition machine should be placed in the department of justice.

The wet and dry debate in the house meanwhile was concentrated on the government's practice of poisoning industrial alcohol. The wets, led by Representative Sirovich, Democrat of New York, were fighting to halt the practice through the substitution of minor denaturants. Sirovich already has carried an appeal to President Hoover to stop the custom, although the executive is not likely to take action.

The drys were ready to defend the practice at any and all times. Rep. Cramton, Republican of Michigan, declared the government had tried other methods of denaturing alcohol only to find that bootleggers easily adapted the alcohol for their illicit traffic. He heartily indorsed the present system of poisoning alcohol.

In the senate, wets and drys were preparing for hearings on measures carrying out the president's recommendation. George W. Wickersham, head of the president's law enforcement commission, and Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard, a member, were invited to appear tomorrow before a senate judiciary subcommittee, to explain the proposed transfer of the prohibition machine. Senator King, Democrat of Utah, chairman of the sub-committee, announced both members of the commission would appear and be heard at a public session. Later, the King committee will call Mellon, Mitchell and Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran.

Official Executioner for Five States is One of Country's Strangest Figures

Home of Robert G. Elliott in Queens Under Constant Police Guard

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—One of the strangest, most furtive figures in the United States today is Robert G. Elliott, the man who throws the switch at electrocutions.

He is the official executioner for the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Delaware. He has pulled the lever in various execution chambers that has sent scores of murderers into oblivion. He has electrocuted, among others, Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray and Sacco and Vanzetti.

His pay is $150 per person executed and he probably has the most unwanted job in the country.

At present his home in Queens is under police guards. Of necessity he lives a life of seclusion. Often, after an electrocution, he receives threatening letters. Following the Snyder-Gray executions his home was bombed

Police On Duty

On the front lawn of the Elliott property in Queens today a police booth stands and a policeman is constantly on duty. There are many reports recently that the executioner was in "imminent danger" after he had snuffed out the lives of Frank Kowalski and Arthur Brown at Sing Sing. Kowalski and Brown killed a policeman in a safe robbery.

ROBERT G. ELLIOTT

However, Elliott, continues his secret trips to the state death chamber at Sing Sing, and to the electrocution buildings in other states.

He does his grisly job efficiently and apparently without any qualms. This writer, who saw him "burn" Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray at Sing Sing and Paul Jaworski, the "killer," at Bellefonte, Pa., can attest to that.

It is a job that would try the most hardened soul. It only takes a minute or two—at most—to put an end to any human being but these minutes seem like hours. And the minutes just preceding an electrocution seem like ages.

Elliott is a tall, thin, cadaverous-looking man of 62, his sparse hair turned gray. There are long, deep lines in his cheeks and his eyes are deep sunk and hollow.

Proficient In Job

He has become so proficient at his job he no longer needs any signal when to throw the switch. He has it "down pat." He knows exactly what moment to "turn on the juice". He has always a full view of the condemned person even though, as is the case at Sing Sing, the switch he pulls is located in an alcove some 15 or 20 feet from that contraption called the "chair."

Elliott shies from interviewers. He slips into the prison—an hour or so before the scheduled time of electrocution and is ready at the fateful hour. He always appears suddenly, mysteriously — from somewhere. On an out of town assignment he usually stays overnight at the local hotel, under an assumed name.

After an electrocution Elliott keeps from sight. The telephone company will not release his phone number, and the police shoo away pedestrians, camera men or persons carrying packages who come near his home. The neighbors live in the fear that an explosion might at any time bomb his home—possibly causing other damage in the neighborhood.

Strangely enough most of the persons whom Elliott has electrocuted have gone to their deaths calmly, some almost nonchalantly. "They seem to get into a resigned, fatalistic frame of mind in the days preceding their death. Lewis E. Lawes, the warden of Sing Sing, gives a typical illustration of how some meet death in his book, "Life and Death in Sing Sing."

Has Sent Scores of Murderers to Death; Is Proficient at Job

Describing how Convicts No. 69711, No. 69712, No. 69713 and No. 69769 (they were involved in a robbery in which one of their number fired a shot, killing a man) went to the electric chair, Warden Lawes wrote:

"No. 69713, who was the first to go, had the mentality of a six or seven year old boy. He was pleased that by the reason of a respite he had cheated the state out of an extra dinner, it being the custom to allow a condemned man a 'big feed' for his last meal. Strange as it may seem, this meal is usually ordered with meticulous care and eaten with great relish.

Game to the End

"While Nos. 69712, 69713, and 69769 were being executed, No. 69711 sang in a firm clear voice, 'Oh, what a pal was Mary,' 'Goodbye, Boys,' and other popular songs of the day. He had been an amateur prizefighter, and admitted he had done a lot of thieving, but boasted that what he had stolen was taken from those who could afford the loss, and had been given to the poor. He asked to be allowed to walk to the chair on his hands, and his chief concern was whether or not the newspapers would carry the story of his gameness so that his old pals would learn of it. As he seated himself in the chair, he said 'Good-bye, warden, old-timer,' and after the straps had been adjusted he ordered in a clear, firm voice, 'Step on the gas!'"

Under the law Warden Lawes has to be in the death chamber when a victim is electrocuted. It is said at Sing Sing that just before the switch is pulled he always turns his head away.

FRED W. WARNER

MARION ATTORNEY ON PROGRAM AT DAYTON

Fred W. Warner To Lead Discussion at Bar Association Meeting

Fred W. Warner, Marion attorney, will be one of the speakers at the midwinter meeting of the Ohio Bar association in Dayton, Thursday, when he will have charge of a general discussion of legislation. Several other local attorneys are planning to attend the meeting, which is scheduled to last three days.

Warner is chairman of the legislative committee of the state association. The discussion to be under his direction will follow luncheon Thursday noon.

One of the featured speakers of the meeting is Roland W. Baggott, who formerly presided over the domestic relations and juvenile courts in Dayton. He is known as the "actor-judge." During his 12 years on the bench, Judge Baggott took leaves of absence on several occasions to tour the Keith circuit and achieved considerable note as humorist. Judge Baggott will speak on the program following the bar association banquet Friday night.

In addition to Judge Baggott, other speakers at the banquet will be United States Senator Roscoe McCullough, of Canton, and Murray Seasongood, former mayor of Cincinnati, and president of the Legal Aid association.

The first gridiron dinner ever to be sponsored by the Ohio Bar association will be held Thursday night at the Hotel Biltmore, Dayton.

Meeker Institute Set for Opening Friday

Another of the series of annual farm institutes to be held in Marion county will begin at Meeker Friday morning at 9 o'clock, according to announcement of Dale Rhoads. The institute programs will continue through Friday and Saturday and end Saturday night with the presentation of "Paying the Fiddler," by the Tymochtee grange, in the Meeker school auditorium, where all sessions of the institute will convene.

In addition to a program of state and county speakers, a number of features have been arranged, including school exercises, corn show, and other contests in which prizes will be awarded.

Leave the party on the big laugh your anecdote has raised and there is no backbiting.

SNOOK IS GRANTED STAY UNTIL FEB. 28

Will Permit His Attorneys To Petition United States Supreme Court

COLUMBUS, Jan. 22—Dr. James Howard Snook, confessed and convicted murderer of Miss Theora Hix, his sweetheart-paramour, will not die until at least Feb. 28.

The Ohio Supreme court, late yesterday, granted the former Ohio State university professor another stay of execution until that date, to permit his attorneys to petition the highest tribunal in the land.

In rendering the decision of the state court, Chief Justice C. T. Marshall said: "A majority of the court grants Dr. Snook an extension of his stay until Feb. 28."

The plea in behalf of Snook was made by Attorney E. O. Ricketts. He pointed out that unless the state court granted the stay, Mrs. Snook, wife of the condemned man, would be put at considerable expense to send attorneys to Washington to directly petition the federal court.

Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., suffered his first defeat in the case of the co-ed's slayer, yesterday by the decision of the court.

The new date of execution is the fourth which has been set for the electrocution of Dr. Snook. Judge Henry Scarlett, who heard the case which involved one of the most brutal slayings in the history of the state, sentenced Snook to die on Nov. 20, following his conviction, on Aug. 14.

The court of appeals upheld the conviction but the supreme court granted a stay until Dec. 20 to permit the case to be brought before that body. The court failed to act upon it by that time, and a further stay until Jan. 31, was granted. The decision which was rendered yesterday, extended the execution date for four more weeks.

This latest stay expires three days after the United States Supreme court reconvenes. Unless it is able to dispose of the motion for a review before that time, it is possible that that body may grant a further stay.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.—Adv.

MR. CLARENCE CHRISTMAN

Because it makes good, even when all else has failed, Konjola has become the most talked of medicine in America. See what Konjola did for him, and then decide what you will let this new and totally different medicine do for you. Mr. Christman says:

"For five years I suffered terrible from indigestion, and no medicine helped me. For six weeks I had to leave my work I was so sick and weak. Even the lightest foods caused pain, and suffering interrupted my rest at night. I lost weight and strength. Then I started on Konjola. In two weeks I gained ten pounds. At the end of the third week I could eat the heaviest of food without the slightest discomfort. I am feeling better in every way, for Konjola cleansed and stimulated the organs of digestion and elimination. To all who suffer as I did my advice is this . . . give Konjola a chance to prove its worth."

There is a movement afoot out in Nebraska to bar the name of Senator George W. Norris from the Republican ticket? Why not? Why should a man who openly championed the election of the Democratic candidate for president in 1928 be permitted to figure in a Republican primary two years later?

One thing which more than any other makes one suspicious of the proposal to junk all battleships is the make-up of the organizations here at home which are championing it. The most of them have invariably been found behind every movement unfriendly to the government which have been launched.

One might almost assume from Senator Borah's comment on the killing of two federal enforcement officers down in Florida that the senator doesn't exactly approve of Commissioner Doran and the latter's methods. The commissioner may have made the mistake of agreeing with the Hon. William.

The "International Labor Defense" is seeking to have Stephen Zlatch, awaiting deportation at Ellis island, sent to Russia instead of Jugo-Slavia, holding that he will be assassinated if he is returned to Jugo-Slavia. Here we have a line on how some of the communists who come to this country to engage in revolutionary activities are esteemed at home.

Ten members of a Chicago family probably owe their lives to the family dog which leaped upon the bed of its mistress and awakened her when a fire broke out in their home. As a Virginia court last week held, the dog is man's best and most faithful friend.

The British writers continue to hold out that there is a moral obligation on us of America to set an example in retrenching in the matter of expenditures for military purposes. Isn't it about time for Americans to begin to wonder why all the moral obligations should rest upon us? And wouldn't it be more in accord with good sense and business for this retrenchment in the cost of military establishments to start with nations less able than America to bear the cost of armaments?

Something of a Coincidence.

It was something of a coincidence that, the same day the newspapers of the land, in connection with the story of the airplane horror out in California in which sixteen lives were lost, printed a summary of major aviation accidents which had resulted in 116 deaths during the preceding fourteen months, they also published the story of the awarding of the Anthony N. Brady medals which brought out that but one passenger of the 280,000,000 carried by the electric railways of the United States in 1929 had been mortally injured.

The Brady memorial medals are awarded annually to the electric railways making the best safety and health promotion records, the contest being sponsored by the American Museum of Safety, the winners for 1929 being the Boston Elevated railway, which took the gold medal in the over 5,000,000 vehicle-mile class; the Tampa Electric company, which won the silver medal in the from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000 mile class, and the Tidewater Power company, of Wilmington, North Carolina, which was awarded the bronze medal in the less than 1,000,000 mile class.

The difference in the fatality records of the two forms of transportation during almost the same periods is very significant of the comparative safety of the two ways of travel, and especially so when it is considered that the summary of 116 deaths due to airplane accidents did not include any fatalities resulting from accidents to plane in which less than three persons were killed and only one such case, that in Florida the day the sixteen met death in California. There were a number of cases in 1929 in which plane crashes resulted in three deaths, more from which two deaths resulted and many in which single deaths were reported.

Such is the difference in the two forms of travel that there are bound to be far more fatalities as the result of flying than will occur from electric railway travel. It can not be anticipated that it will be otherwise until flying has been developed and become an established art. It may be years; it may be decades; before the claims made regarding the safety of air travel are justified by performance.

Health Conditions of the Country.

Statistics carried in a report submitted to congress by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, of the public health service, show that the health conditions of the country are far from satisfactory. During the fiscal year, 1929, bubonic plague was reported in California and Hawaii, and in the calendar year, 1928, the last year for which figures have as yet been compiled, the surgeon general reports an increase in the number of deaths and a decrease in the number of births. The death rate of 11.5 to 1,000 population in 1927 increased to 12.1 in 1928, while the birth rate of 20.7 to 1,000 in 1927 fell off to 19.7 in 1928. The infant mortality rate, it may be said here, increased from 64.5 to 1,000 births in 1927 to 67.9 to 1,000 in 1928.

The increased death rate is held to have been due to influenza, which developed along the Pacific coast in the spring of 1928, fell off during the summer, attained the proportions of an epidemic in the fall of that year and spread rapidly eastward, reaching its peak over the country as a whole in the early part of the past year.

These belated statistics show that the epidemic was alike more widespread and more severe than generally realized at the time. Surveys conducted in a number of states by the health service showed that nearly fifteen per cent., on the average, of their populations suffered from the disease, 0.47 per cent. had pneumonia and fourteen per cent. had severe colds which might, or might not, have been directly related to the epidemic.

Another disturbing feature of the report was the showing of 38,000 cases of smallpox in 1928 against 35,000 in 1927, the summary pointing out that the United States is a greater sufferer from this disease than any other country save British India.

Other disappointing features were an increase from 4,792 deaths in forty-three states in 1926 from pellagra to 6,652 in the same states in 1928, and increases in tularaemia and typhus, though the two latter were not marked in degree.

Heartening features of the surgeon general's report were the splendid results of the campaigns which have been waged against typhoid fever and tuberculosis. The calendar year, 1928, showed a new low death rate from the former. At the beginning of the present century, typhoid fever resulted in thirty-four deaths to the 100,000 population. This rate has been decreased year by year, and in 1928 but 5,425 deaths were reported by forty-three states in which accurate records were kept, which means a death rate of but 4.8 to the 100,000, a decrease of eighty-six per cent., a result held due "to the practical application of the principles of modern sanitary science."

The deaths from tuberculosis, which also have been decreasing since the beginning of the century, showed the lowest rate ever recorded by the health service. The fatalities were 77.5 to the 100,000 population in 1928, whereas at the beginning of the century they exceeded 200.

The showing made in the battles which have been waged against typhoid fever in that tuberculosis are the more encouraging and they make evident beyond all question what concerted effort can do in applying scientific methods to the battling against disease. The accomplishments against these two diseases no doubt may be duplicated if the same intelligent, persistent effort is directed against influenza, smallpox and the other diseases which are reported by the health service as having made increased inroads into the health of the nation.

One of the companions of the blond woman arrested out in Arizona and held for the service of a warrant charging her with shooting and killing a highway patrolman near New Castle, Pennsylvania, last month, has admitted taking part in the killing. That's the way in the criminal world. Sooner or later, somebody weakens and the game is up.

The warden of Sing Sing prison has expressed his willingness to accept all the parrots people may send to the prison as a result of the "parrot fever" scare. Evidently Warden Lewis, through a native of New York, has one of the chief characteristics of a man from Missouri.

There were 1,960,000 unemployed in Germany at the end of 1929, approximately 150,000 more than at the close of the preceding year, but far fewer than was anticipated, which is taken as a ground for congratulation there. In a word, the Germans, while realizing that the situation is not what it should be, are rejoicing that it is no worse. One can't help admiring a spirit like that.

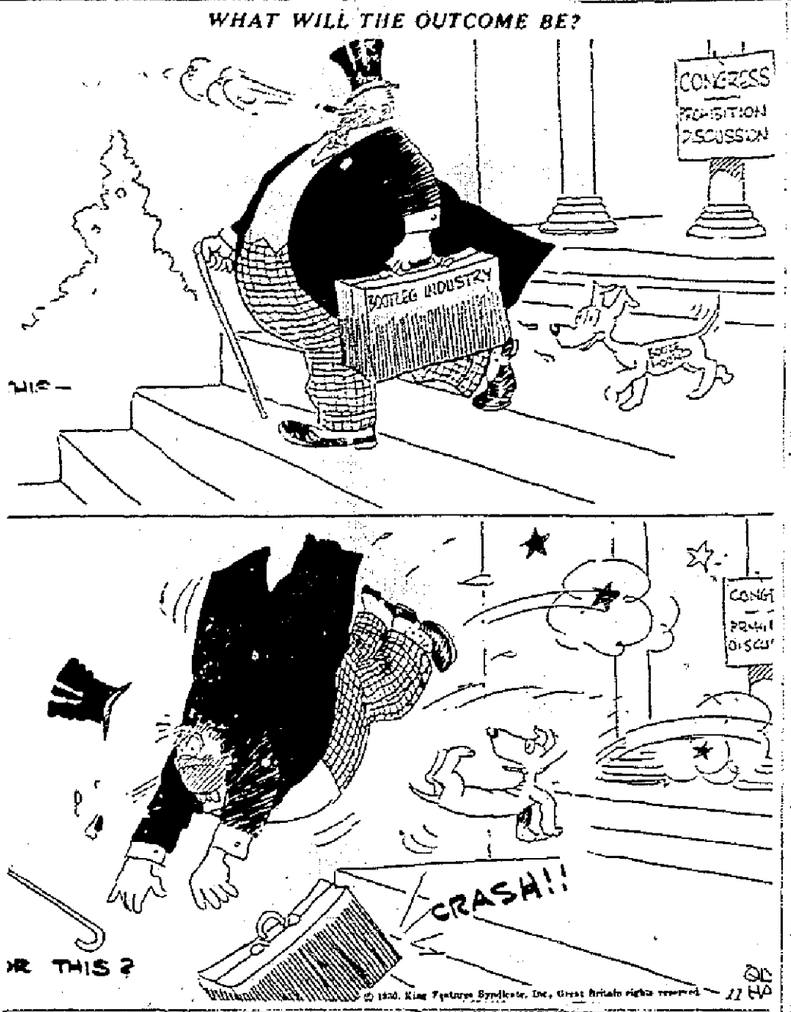
A citizen of Harlan, out in Iowa, died recently, leaving a bequest for the purchase and maintenance of a hearse to be operated exclusively for the benefit of residents free of charge. We do not pretend to know anything about Harlan, but there are towns from which one who thus eases the exit should be deemed a public benefactor.

If there is anything left of the Carnegie foundation report on college activities, it isn't owing to the intention, but rather due to mere inadvertence on the part of Professor Ralph W. Alger, of the University of Michigan law school, to whom was assigned the job of dissecting the foundation's survey.

It has been disclosed that the old wooden man-of-war, Augusta, a sailing vessel, which is recalled by the cruiser, Augusta, cost $16,294. The cost of preserving peace has advanced somewhat since the days of the original Augusta. Sixteen thousand dollars would not buy one of the cannon on its namesake.

An almost priceless diamond and pearl necklace lost by former Queen Victoria, of Portugal, during the recent royal wedding ceremonies in Rome, was found and turned over to the governor of Rome by a workman. Even in this era of crime, we must not suffer the delusion that all sense of honesty in the world is dead. It's predominant, but we only hear of it in exceptional cases such as this.

WHAT WILL THE OUTCOME BE?



A Foolish Fear.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Many persons worry over nosebleed. They seem to think it means high blood pressure, "congestion of the brain," weakened blood vessels, cancer and goodness knows what other terrible things.

What lots of things there are to worry over. There seems born in the soul of each of us the fear of death. We are taught that the blood is the very life of the body. If this precious fluid begins to runaway, if nothing else happens, certainly there oozes out with it the bravery we ordinarily possess.

This is a foolish fear and unworthy of us. Besides, fear sets the heart beating strongly and this in turn increases the bleeding. You see the heart is influenced by our emotions. The sight of blood is apt to depress the heart action, or else the fear stimulates and excites it.

There are many forms of bleeding. Nosebleed is the commonest. It may result from injury, from local disease, or from some systemic disturbance.

Certain diseases of the kidneys, liver, lungs and heart produce congestion and may cause nosebleed. Some acute fevers have bleeding from the nose as one of the symptoms. Measles, influenza, pneumonia, diphtheria, whooping cough, scarlet fever, and especially typhoid fever are such diseases. Anemia, and other conditions where the blood quality is reduced may have nosebleed as one of the complications.

A blow on the nose, and catarrh, when there is ulceration within the nose, are common causes of nosebleed. Almost everybody has more or less catlarh. This is due in many cases to carelessness of the average individual regarding the common cold and its neglect.

Repeated colds are followed by chronic inflammation of the tissues of the nose. Constant blowing and fussing with the nose result in broken tissues inside that organ. There is a little raw spot. Mucus collects on this spot, hardens and forms an annoying crust. The crust comes off before the ulcer is healed and this may be the beginning of obstinate trouble.

In another case there might be what is best described as an enlarged and easily broken blood vessel. In blowing the nose there may be a gush of blood.

But let me make clear to you that nosebleed is almost always founded on some local disturbance, easily accounted for and corrected. Go to your doctor or a nose specialist. He will give you a little treatment and the trouble will probably disappear.

If you are at home where you have access to home remedies, you may use any one of several simple remedies in treatment of nosebleed. Cold applications are recommended. They may be used on the neck or over the nose.

Sometimes putting the feet in hot water will force the blood away from the head and thus assist in controlling the bleeding. Pinching the nose between the thumb and finger will sometimes put enough pressure on the bleeding point to control the hemorrhage.

Tannic acid dissolved in water may be applied on cotton. The patient clears the nose by blowing out the clots of blood and a cotton tampon is then pushed into the nasal passage. Peroxide of hydrogen is also a satisfactory agent for controlling bleeding, and one of the best things is adrenalin chloride. This is a solution which is found in many houses and is a marked astringent.

Do not be frightened. Keep cool, do not worry, and doubtless everything will be all right after waiting a short time.

Editorial Opinion.

MRS. OWEN SHOULD REMAIN.

No technicality of law, if one exists, should be permitted to deprive Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen of her seat in the house of representatives. Though the widow of an Englishman, one would have to hunt pretty far to find a more thorough-going American than Mrs. Owen or one whose intelligence and dignity of character better fitted him or her to represent a constituency in our national legislature.

It seems hardly necessary to point out that Mrs. Owen was born in this country of revolutionary stock, the daughter of William Jennings Bryan—this paper frequently differed with Mr. Bryan's governmental proposals and policy; it never doubted his sincerity—and is therefore as thoroughly indigenous a product of the country and as completely steeped in its traditions as any person to be found within its boundaries. It happens that at the time of her marriage the law prescribed that any woman who became the wife of a foreigner automatically forfeited her American citizenship. But this discrimination against the sex was rectified in 1922 by the Cable act, which provides that an American-born woman who has lost her citizenship through marriage to a foreigner and has subsequently become naturalized shall be considered as having regained the status she enjoyed before her marriage. Mrs. Owen became naturalized in 1925, and she now contends that in the meaning of the law she was never an alien, and is, therefore, as eligible to the house of representatives as if she had married an American.

Her Republican opponent, whose name we forget, insists, on the other hand, that she has not complied with the provision in the constitution which requires that a member of the house shall have been seven years a citizen of the United States—Mrs. Owen was elected in November, 1928. We know he is wrong in the spirit that animated him in raising such a pettifogging objection and we hope that his legal interpretation of this constitutional provision as it affects Mrs. Owen's case will be held to be equally erroneous.—New York Herald Tribune.

A $325,000 VAN OF FURNITURE.

The idea that old furniture has a large financial as well as household value has been rather generally grasped. The plot of more than one novel has turned on the discovery of unsuspected assets of this kind. When that adversity comes which always comes, sooner or later, in novels, and things are at their lowest ebb for the principal figures, somebody spots highly-marketable used furniture in the living-rooms or unused furniture in the attic, which is sold, and everybody lives happily in clover thereafter.

However, the fortunes old furniture brings in novels have often seemed so incredible as to make the whole plot far fetched. Who could believe that rickety old chairs and marred tables and scratched desks would bring any such prices as those given at an auction in New York the other day? Even connoisseurs in this sort of thing were amazed.

That a small silversmith's anvil, once used by Paul Revere, should bring $9,700 and a maple armchair used by John Hancock when inaugurated as Massachusetts' governor $5,600 might seem to be explained by their appeal to collectors as historical relics. Bids, however, for old American made furniture associated with average American personnages and families ranged up into these figures:

Inlaid mahogany Heppelwhite style secretary, made by John Seymour, Philadelphia, 1790, $30,000.

Carved mahogany tea table, made by John Goddard, Newport, 1762, $20,000.

Cherry highboy, Aaron Chapin, New England, 1770, $12,000.

Four card tables, John Townsend, Newport, 1780, $2,800 each.

New England secretary, $13,000.

Nine carved mahogany chairs, $1,000 each.

The total receipts of a three-hour sale were $325,000, and the average high bid on all articles offered was $840. Doubtless not a little of the old furniture still preserved in homes of the West are copies by obscure cabinetmakers, from more famous masters, but much of even that is valuable. Probably in many attics, if not in other rooms, are articles of furniture which are not to be sold at the first offer, without inquiry as to real market worth.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Flu Germ.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The world was electrified recently by the encouraging news that a young scientist of the University of Chicago had discovered and isolated the germ responsible for influenza. The achievement is highly important from a scientific standpoint, since the various waves of influenza during the past two decades have resulted in appalling loss of life. The way has been cleared for devising means for counteracting the effects of this particular germ.

Some skepticism was expressed at first, in influential medical circles, as to the evidence regarding this new discovery. But information given out through the department of public relations of the University of Chicago appears to have no doubt as to the validity and trustworthiness of the results announced.

Over a period of six years, Dr. Isadore S. Falk, professor of hygiene and bacteriology, has been directing the experiments to detect which of the dozens of possible bacteria might be found guilty of causing the disease. Of the 3,000 different microbes considered, that one known as "pleomorphic streptococcus" has been identified as the guilty party.

One of the difficult phases of the problem was, not only to eliminate scores of suspects, but to keep alive the various microbes to be studied, after the influenza. Dr. Falk finally hit upon a heated protein broth with sheep blood as the best medium with which to sustain both the virulent and non-virulent forms of the particular streptococcus under suspicion.

Dr. Falk was aided by fourteen members of the bacteriology department, all of whom developed influenza during the course of the epidemic. The germs of influenza, obtained from twenty-four people in all, were used to inoculate monkeys. More than 125 monkeys were used in the course of the experiments. These animals were employed as influenza in simians is similar to that in human beings.

A particular and unusual microbe was finally obtained from one of Dr. Falk's assistants who was just beginning to become ill with influenza. This microbe, grown in pure culture, was sprayed into the nose and throat of monkeys who then developed a disease resembling "flu" in human cases. This disease was transmitted from monkey to monkey, kept in contact with each other through confinement in a common cage.

The isolated microbe in non-virulent form is frequently present in the mouths of normal people. In a moderately virulent form, the same microbe will cause an acute "cold" resembling influenza. In the fully virulent form, it is believed to produce the disease of influenza in epidemic.—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

Writing a daily column looks easy. stop whatever you are doing and try to ... one and you'll get a skeleton idea. I, for instance, bounded out of bed this morning ... a head, as heads go, fairly clear. A ... plunge added to the stimulation.

In my absurd conceit I felt chock full ready and superlative "copy." And ... breakfast I fairly skipped—tra-la—to ... typewriter, and this is how I started ... "Hundreds of New Yorkers studying ... Yogis, have gone vegetarian and ... strange credos between bites of lettuce."

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

There is still much talk about youth—how good or how bad it is. Finally we get some real authority on the subject. The education section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science makes a report. The verdict is that youth today is no better and no worse than the present adult generation.

The report made by Professor Lockhart, teacher of psychology at Drake university, presents the result of a study of the attitude of youth toward law and law enforcement. He finds young people "do not differ greatly from adults in their attitude toward law."

If you are interested in the experiment in prohibition in this country you are doubly interested in observing the difference between the average grown-up of your acquaintance and the average boy toward law breaking. Often the average they think and act alike.

Here is something for churchmen to think about. At the meeting of the Association for the Advancement of Science it develops that young people in school who have radical ideas, or at least liberal ideas, in regard to religion, are brighter in their studies than those who have more conservative or orthodox ideas. A psychologist says the less advanced tend to orthodoxy.

This does not settle the question as to ... tween fundamentalism or liberalism in religion, but it is a sidelight on the action of mind and the conclusions which the active mind reaches.

Speaking of prohibition; as almost every one is, a representative of a fraternal organization has made a tour of sixteen universities and colleges in the United States. He reports that drinking among students has shown a marked decline during the past year. He also discovers there is more drinking among students in western universities than among those in eastern and southern schools.

From hero to zero is about the average route in the public's fickle opinion. So was Eddie Rickenbacker, America's greatest ace in the war. Rickenbacker smiles happily enough when he says it. The motorcycle squad may not clear a way for him every time he visits a strange city as it used to, but he is a big man in business—vice president of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America. And undoubtedly he likes his job much better than heroing.

LAY OUT 3 MILLON FOR JUSTICE WORK

Will Be Used To Speed Up Enforcement, Carry Out Reforms

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—Department of justice appropriations are increased more than $3,700,000 for the next fiscal year to speed up law enforcement machinery throughout the country and carry out the department's prison reform program in the annual state, justice, commerce and labor supply bill which was reported to the house by its appropriations committee today.

The committee's recommendations were made after elaborate hearings during which Attorney General Mitchell pointed to the congestion of business in federal courts throughout the country.

More than $2,000,000 of the increase is taken up by the prison reform program, which includes funds with which new industries may be established in federal prisons. The committee granted an increase of $473,000 in the annual sum for detection and prosecution of crimes. A hundred thousand dollar increase will provide for new business expected in new federal courts and as a result of the enactment of the Jones-Stalker "five and ten" prohibition law. A pay boost of $256,000 is provided for assistant attorneys. Higher sums are provided for clerks' and marshals' offices.

Approximately one-third of the $31,710,302 recommended for the department of justice is used in enforcement of prohibition, according to Chairman Wood, Republican of Indiana.

The entire bill carries $118,799,286 for the four departments compared with $112,149,121 last year.

REPORTS FINDING

Crawford County Judge Assess Costs Against Upper Sandusky Firm

BUCYRUS, Jan. 22—Judge J. Walter Wright made an unusual finding in common pleas court Tuesday in the case of H. B. Hubley, formerly of Bucyrus against the City Loan & Savings company of Upper Sandusky, when he held that although Hubley was entitled to an accounting there was nothing due him.

Hubley claimed that the local account disposed of his household goods for the satisfaction of an alleged sum of money due the loan company. The company failed to make an accounting. In view of the fact that Hubley was justified in bringing the suit against the company, costs were assessed against the Upper Sandusky firm. Attorneys in the case were E. J. Myers and Attorney Clair of Lima for Hubley and Calvin Knisely of Galion for the loan company.

B. Dunham, county dog warden, was called and the first cow having died the head was taken to Columbus by Dunham and Sheriff Charles Miller. Tests disclosed positive rabies. Dr. R. L. Pierce, health commissioner, states that apparently there is no indication that other animals have been infected but that close watch is being kept for further developments.

KENTON COUNCIL HOLDS SESSION

Vote To Accept Offer of John Wilkinson; Start Work at Once

KENTON, Jan. 22 — Although numerous persons had requested utilizing the old Scioto river channel west of Leighton st., as a city dumping grounds, council last night voted acceptance of the offer of John Wilkinson to use an abandoned, artificial lake on his premises as a dump site.

With the aid of state trucks, city workmen are to start immediately constructing a roadway of cinders and gravel connecting the lake with Leighton st., near its intersection with the Scioto river.

Wilkinson two weeks ago offered the old lake site to the city free provided a roadway was constructed. It was dug years ago at a cost of more than $4,500 for the purpose of artificial ice manufacture and was in later years abandoned. The owner is now desirous of filling the hole.

ILL AT SANITORIUM

First Woman Senator Reported In Serious Condition

ATLANTA, Jan. 22—Conscious only at rare moments, Mrs. Rebecca Lafimer Felton, 94, the only woman to ever hold a seat in the United States senate, was unimproved today at a local sanitorium to which she was taken, suffering from bronchial pneumonia.

The aged patient spent a restless night and her condition this morning was unchanged, physicians said. The bronchial attack was suffered by Georgia's "grand old lady" after she came here last week from her home in Cartersville in the interest of the Georgia Training school for girls in which she held an interest since its founding.

Physicians, because of Mrs. Felton's advanced age, were fearful of her chances for recovery.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22 — Complete financial collapse of Chicago's local government is only a matter of days, according to a report placed before the city today by Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens' committee.

Chicago's situation is "critically desperate," the emergency group reported today following a frantic three-day search for some means to forestall the financial crisis facing the city, county and school board.

Bankers have refused assistance, and the situation, stated briefly by Attorney Strawn, is that with virtually $290,000,000 in debts, the local governments are "flat broke" with no prospect of obtaining emergency cash.

$154,406.08 Placed in General Fund To Cover Advertising, Etc.

UPPER SANDUSKY, Jan. 22—The board of Wyandot County Commissioners appropriated $820,811.61 to defray county expenditures for the year 1930. Of this amount $151,406.08 has been apportioned to the general fund to pay for advertising, assessing property, elections, general executive, courts, sheriff, corrections, charity, engineering, buildings and grounds, soldiers' relief, and miscellaneous expenses. The amount apportioned for ditches was $13,911.50; for county roads and bridges $185,207.85; for state roads and bridges $21,925.04; for the dog and kennel fund $4,921.43; for sinking fund purposes $220,965.82; and for bond retirement purposes $12,320.30.

The following expenditures are apportioned for the charity group: blind relief, $4,800; mothers' pensions, $8,500; tuberculosis care and treatment, $1,200; clothings and incidentals for state institutions, $5,000; maintenance of children in homes not owned by the county, $3,600, and soldiers' relief, $1,400.

JURY IN JONES CASE IS UNABLE TO AGREE

Discharged by Judge Duncan After Deliberating Four Hours

The trial of Sam Jones, colored, of Grand township, on an indictment charging him with carrying concealed weapons, ended in a jury disagreement in common pleas court shortly after 9 o'clock last night. The jury was discharged when it reported inability to agree after about four hours' deliberation.

Judge William P. Duncan, of Findlay, presided during the hearing. He came here during the absence of Judge Seofield, who was in Findlay presiding at the trial of two Van Lue men accused of bank robbery. Both were found guilty and Judge Seofield was to sentence them today.

One of the main points argued in the Sam Jones case related to the fact that when arrested on the concealed weapon charge he was on his own premises. The arrest was made by Sheriff Frances and his deputies after they had searched Jones' place for liquor.

Jones was returned to the county jail to await decision on whether he will be tried again.

The Jones case is the last of the list of indictments reported by the recent grand jury. All of the 15 indicted pleaded guilty with the exception of Jones. As a result, one was released on parole, another was given a suspended sentence and the others are serving terms in either the state reformatory or state penitentiary.

The percentage of pleas of guilty is said to be one of the largest in local grand jury history. As a result of the elimination of the trials that would have been necessary had the indicted persons pleaded not guilty, the county was saved expense estimated at hundreds of dollars.

CHECK DISEASES

One Case of Smallpox Reported In Morrow County

MT. GILEAD, Jan. 22—One case of smallpox is reported at Cilmar. John Pinyerd is a victim of the confluent forms. From a check of exposures it is believed that the disease was transmitted from Galion thence to Lancaster county and back to Morrow county. So far as known by the health authorities no exposures have been made in this county but there is a possibility that there were some from this case in Martel and Galion.

Other contagious diseases have also invaded the county but not in epidemic proportion. Ludlow Corbin, son of Grover W. Corbin of Bennington township contracted measles in Columbus. The case is isolated and no others have developed.

Several cases of mumps are reported in the Edison schools; five cases of chicken pox are reported in the Chesterville schools and a few cases of whooping cough are reported in the Mt. Gilead schools.

GALION, Jan. 22—The Model T Ford of C. H. Wilson, local rural mail carrier, as partially destroyed by fire Tuesday, while Mr. Wilson was delivering mail on the Cromerweit rd., about one and one-half miles from the county line.

While Mr. Wilson was driving along, flames suddenly burst forth from underneath the hood and he immediately threw the mail out as it would have been destroyed.

Unfair Pain

It is not fair that some women should suffer so each month. It isn't necessary! The menstrual process is natural, but the painful part is not. Midol will prove this to every woman who will try it. These wonderful tablets are non-narcotic, but they banish every bit of pain. They act directly on the organs affected by menstruation and they take effect in five to seven minutes. Better yet, the woman who anticipates her time and takes a tiny tablet of Midol beforehand will experience no pain at all.

Realize what Midol means. It is the product of specialists for this special purpose and it really does end all suffering and even the discomfort women once had to endure at such times. Always obtainable at any drug store in the convenient aluminum pocket case for only fifty cents.—Adv.

Why Fat

WHEN SO MANY FIND IT EASY TO REDUCE

All can see everywhere that countless people have found the right way to fight fat. Slender figures now prevail. Excess fat has largely disappeared. Mark the people you know who in late years have gained new youth and beauty, new health and vigor, by combating fat.

One great reason lies in the discovery that most fat people have an under-active gland. Its failure to control nutrition permits too much food to form fat. Modern physicians, in treating obesity, combat that cause.

Their method is the basis of Marmola prescription tablets. Each box contains the formula, also the reasons for the good results. People have used Marmola for 22 years—millions of boxes of it. And the results have come without abnormal exercise or diet.

Why retain your excess fat when so many have ended theirs? Go try their method—try it now. Get Marmola, read the book in the box. Take four tablets daily, as directed, and watch the changes that occur. Do this in justice to yourself, to please your family and friends. You will be delighted.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD

... inspector, who was not in a good temper that morning. Jimmie grinned. When one has several thousand neatly docketed fingerprints of all criminals, including even pilferers, it is annoying to find a murderer's counterfoil.

A moment later he heard "Captain Smith's" voice. The interview was brief. "Captain Smith" congratulated him on his find and then went on to say, with a hint of triumph, that he was afraid Jimmie wouldn't do much good in London. Awfully sorry, you know.

"Why?" asked Jimmie amazed.

"I happen to know you're working on a blind," returned "Captain Smith."

Jimmie had a strange suspicion. He himself had used the word "blind" in the faked notes that Neasden had found. Had Neasden passed the blind on?

"You mean," said Jimmie with a wild guess, "that you believe it's hidden elsewhere? Say, perhaps, somewhere on the east coast?"

A Few False Clues

The momentary pause before "Captain Smith" replied stiffly: "You leave my part of the show alone," showed that he had guessed right.

He jammed the receiver down at the end of the interview and rocked with laughter. Doubtless even now the redoubtable "Captain Smith" was poring over the faked evidence which he, Rezaire, had manufactured and which Neasden, or the mysterious No. One, had probably cleverly passed on. He had set a trap for a fox; he had caught a whole pack of hounds as well. And he recalled now Neasden's reputed visit to Yarmouth yesterday. It was probable—no, certain—that when "Captain Smith" made inquiries, if he had not done so already, there would be found near Yarmouth a launch chartered by a mysterious stranger for an unknown destination, and a few other false clues to keep the police busy. Well, that moved the secret service off the board; the battle was now between No. One and himself. He suddenly wondered how No. One had avoided the difficulty of the restaurant's name on the top of the menu card, and then realized that he would simply have torn it off. And—Rezaire suddenly slapped his leg—that would account for the changed handwriting on the menus on Sunday. Not even by the means of the handwriting on the card in his possession would "Captain Smith" now be able to trace the restaurant concerned.

Jimmie sobered as he realized what a subtle brain was this No. One, against whom he had so airily pitted himself.

He settled down in the lounge, impatiently waiting to hear what Vir would have to tell him. On her information he hoped that at last they might be able to work out some method of getting hold of the Murchison sighter and rounding up No. One and his gang. For time was getting on. There were only four days more.

In the Room Above

"Here you are!" said Jimmie at last. "Now let's have the story."

The three of them settled down at their usual corner table; for Jimmie always considered that a busy hotel lounge was the ideal place to discuss secrets and yet look innocent.

"I've had the most amazing luck," began Vir and paused for dramatic effect. "I've seen—or think I have—that Murchison bomb thing itself."

"Good God!" gasped Jimmie. "The devil you have! Are you certain?"

"Yes," interrupted Hyslop complacently, "on stirring up the jolly old brain, we've decided that Vir has seen the goods."

"I only had a second, but it's something like a small square framework of metal with levers that looked like a little metal ball with a hole in it. Oh, I think there was a wire attached. Would that be it?"

"Sounds like it," said Jimmie excitedly. "Go on."

"Well"—Vir settled down happily for she loved a good story—"after H. H. and I staggered upstairs with our arms around each other's necks * * *"

"By the way, Vir, sorry to interrupt, but did you tip off that blonde? She's the girl I told you of, and she's one of the gang."

"Yes, I guessed that. * * * Well, to resume. H. H. lay down on a bed in a room above and looked green and I held his hand; and I'm damned if the old fat man didn't send up a waiter to watch us. However, he seemed soft, because when I vamped him and asked for a glass of water for H. H., who was letting off an occasional groan, he rushed downstairs to get it. At which I picked up my skirts and ran out. * * *"

"Shouldn't have thought they'd have been in the way," grinned Jimmie.

"Now then, keep to business!" reproved Vir, but looked pleased nevertheless. "Well, I managed to give the whole place the rapid once-over. There were two other bedrooms on that floor, both looking innocent, so I skipped upstairs * * *"

"Good Lord!" groaned Jimmie seriously. "You might have ruined the whole show."

"The next floor," continued Vir, imperturbable in the knowledge of her success, "was practically the top, though a ladder led up further—probably to attics.

"In the back room I saw a light. So this child took a peep through the keyhole, and there I saw the contraption I've described on a table, with a man evidently bending over it, for I could make out his hands."

"What devil's own luck!" murmured Rezaire.

"Wasn't it? But the fellow must have had a guilty conscience, because no sooner had I got this glimpse when he stopped, and came to the door. I had about a second to act—not time to get down the stairs. So I dodged into a room nearby at the end of the passage and just shut the door in time. I heard him open his door—it was locked, so he must have been doing something secret—and stand there listening. He hadn't seen me, and presently he went back."

"What did the man you saw look like?" inquired Rezaire.

A Typewriter Case

"Small, clean shaven, and I think a tooth or so missing in front. I couldn't look at him too closely."

"That's our laddie," said Hyslop. "The fellow who was with the blonde. We're getting quite a line on this No. 1 performin' troupe now, aren't we?"

"Wonder why he wasn't with the girl last night," Jimmie mused. "However, we now know for certain what we're suspected all along—that the Murchison sighter is kept in that restaurant. Back room on the third floor. You've certain they weren't suspicious of you?"

"I'm certain Vir and I weren't really suspected," put in Hyslop. "They put some one on to follow us, but that's because they're too darned efficient to take any chance. And we must jolly well have proved our innocence," he grinned.

"Or rather our guilt, H. H. By the way, you owe me 17,460 pounds."

"Now chuck fooling, you two. We've got to think. By the way," he added struck with a thought, "I hope they don't keep it in a safe. If so it's going to be difficult. You say, Vir, that it wasn't on the table when you repassed?"

"No. There was only a typewriter in a case. I say, I wonder * * *"

But Jimmie was on to it, too. The word "Corona" in the dead man's shorthand which had so puzzled him suddenly fitted into the scheme with a click.

"That's it!" he cried, half to himself. "They'd be afraid of a safe, because it's so obvious, but mounted up instead of a typewriter, with a locked cover over it. * * * Keep quiet, you two. I've an idea!"

There was a silence while Jimmie thought rapidly.

He had just remembered the back yard of the Vine and a vague plan had come to him. The chief requirement of any plan was swiftness in execution. A scheme which necessitated breaking open locks or a lengthy smuggling of the Murchison out of the building was not good, because there was the risk of being discovered before he had achieved his object. In which case no second chance would present itself, for the spies would take fright and change their intention. His plan must be swift, simple, and above all, in the event of failure, must not be apparent as having been an attempt at all, in order that No. One and his gang might remain unsuspecting.

"Now listen," he began, when at last he saw his scheme stretching clearly before him in his mind. "This is what we are going to do; and we're going to do it tonight. * * *"

HER CROSS LITTLE BOY WOULDN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"My little son had poor appetite, couldn't sleep and was cross. I gave him Vinol and it ended these troubles like magic."—Mrs. L. DuCrest.

The very FIRST bottle brings sound sleep and a BIG appetite. Vinol tastes delicious. Henner & Cooper, Druggists.—Adv.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

WEDNESDAY. It got a little colder in the night, but it was warm and windless again today, so that now the snow is almost all melted off the roofs, and I think Jubilee likes the warmer weather. He looks at me like he thought it was me that made it warm, and it isn't any use to tell him I didn't, because a dog has not got any sense. The bunch was all in the barn, and I didn't think about anything when Banty left the sliding board that opens the hole into the alley half open, and I was milking away for all I was worth when I heard a holler and all the bunch started laughing, and I found that the Lost Bag of Tripe had come down the alley and had poked his head in the hole to look around and see who was there before he came in because he had slammed Banty a belly-buster in the slush yesterday, and Banty had pushed the board and caught him by the neck. He wanted me to make Banty turn him loose, but I wouldn't do it. I told him the only one that could turn him loose was Banty, because he was Banty's prisoner. And whilst he was begging Banty tore off a splinter from a split board in the side of the barn and wedged the board tight on his neck and then Banty went out in the alley and then the Lost Bag of Tripe began to wiggle and holler. When I got done milking we all opened the alley door and went out to see what Banty was doing, and he had went and pulled the mutt's pants off and was chunking him with wet snow balls. I asted him if he wasn't afraid the Lost Bag of Tripe would get peonia and he said folks got peonia in their lungs and that the Lost Bag of Tripe's lungs wasn't exposed, and then he raised him another and then someone that had snuck back into the barn let the Lost Bag of Tripe's head loose and he pulled out his head and turned around and pounced on Banty like a wildcat on a chicken. They were both rolling over and over on the manure pile when I heard a sort of gasp and looked around and it must have been Feeble or Younie or Margie that let the Lost Bag of Tripe loose, and had then come to the door to see what was the matter, and then they turned around and skun out for school and didn't even stop to see my mother, and Banty got loose and skun out, and the Lost Bag of Tripe grabbed his pants which were all wet from the slush, and I went in and strained my milk and fed my face and then we all went to school, and none of the girls would look at us all day. And I bet that will be a lesson to them.

It looks to me like the Lost Bag of Tripe is kinda stuck on Feeble. Because it was on her account that he got in bad with Banty. But I would hate to be either one of them and be stuck on the other.

Life is worth living for, if one doesn't expect too much out of it.

Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Still Fearful That Boys Saw Revolver Will Nook, Dicky Removes the Gun

I AM sure that if Junior, by some legerdemain, had produced his father's revolver and pointed it at us, Dicky and I would not have been more surprised than we were by our young son's calm announcement that his father would shoot any marauder with his revolver. We had been so certain that the boy had never known of the existence of the weapon that the mere possibility of his having seen its hiding place but a minute or two before had sent us both into a panic. And now—he was mentioning the gun with the casual air with which he would have spoken of a tennis racquet or a golf club.

Either I was the first to recover, or Dicky purposely left the questioning to me. At any rate, I found myself saying tremulously:

"A revolver, Junior! You never saw Dad with a revolver, did you?"

"No, I never did," our small son returned. "But he must have one, mustn't he? He was a brave flyer in the war. He was an ace. You always told me that Mums, didn't you?"

"Of course, dear," I reassured the mounting panic in his tone, while Dicky made the deprecatory little grunts of a modest man who hears himself praised. "I told you the truth. But—"

"But don't brave aces always have revolvers?" There was so much disappointment in the boy's face that I gave him a quick affirmative. Plainly he had been boasting to Roderick of his father's fame.

"Yes, Junior, of course, he always had a revolver in war time."

"But what did he do with it?" The boyish voice was sharp with fear. "He didn't give it away, did he? When you showed me his silver wings you said they'd be mine some day. But I'd want his revolver, too. Hasn't he got it?"

I waved a helpless hand toward Dicky, for I was not equal to Junior's third degree any longer.

"Yes, son, I hate it, carefully put away for you," Dicky said gravely.

"Is it in this room?" I remembered what Dicky has frequently said of his son's "one track mind," and hurried to the rescue.

"Trade Cat Rattle"

"I do not think you ought to ask your father where he keeps his revolver, Junior," I said gravely. "He has told you that he is keeping it safe for you, and that is all you need to know. When you are old enough, he will show it to you, and perhaps teach you how to shoot with it. So do not talk about it again. Now I will tell you what the noise was downstairs. I went down to the billiard room and Katie heard me moving around down there. You know how excited she gets over little things."

Junior nodded and turned to Roderick.

"She's the biggest 'fraid cat about some things and other things she isn't scared of at all," he explained lucidly.

"So," I went on, as he turned back to me, "she thought there was a burglar in the basement and started to scream at the top of her voice. Of course everybody heard her and they all ran down. But by that time I had called to Katie and she saw everything was all right."

"Did Dad take his revolver when he ran down?" Junior asked.

The question made me hesitate. Was it possible that the boy knew his father had taken the weapon with him and with the cunning of childhood was testing our truthfulness. But my voice was firm as I answered him.

Dicky Removes the Gun

"Did I tell you a minute ago that you were not to ask your father any questions about his revolver? Please do not forget again."

"I won't," Junior returned. But ——"

"Not another word of questions," I told him, but with a smile at the two faces upturned to mine. "You're going to be late for breakfast as it is. Run along now and show Aunt Katherine how quickly you can get dressed."

"All right," he replied obediently. "Come on Rod"; and the two trotted out.

Dicky made two strides to the door, locked it and sank down in the nearest chair.

"I don't mind telling you I'm all in," he said. "And the worst of it is, I'm not sure that they haven't spotted the gun."

"No, I don't believe they have done that," I told him, and described the mental measurements I had made.

"Let's hope you are right, as you usually are," he said. "But that makes one thing a certainty. There must be no mistake about keeping this thing locked all the time. I've never had a look on it, because the thing looked so like a panel that no one could know there was a recess behind it. But even with the bare possibility of their having seen the thing, I feel shaky. I'll fix up a lock today. In the meantime——"

He jerked open the door of the recess, took out the revolver, walked to his desk, thrust the gun inside, locked the desk and put the key in his pocket.

Egypt's Prince-Poet Is Honored in Death

CAIRO—The Prince-poet of Egypt is dead.

Prince Haidar Fazil, cousin to King Fuad and one of the best known and loved members of the royal family of Egypt, who has just died, had made his name renown throughout French speaking civilization by the quality of his verse.

Several of his most coveted French literary prizes have gone to him. His "L'Homme Heroic" won the Languedoc award, while his best known work is probably "Les Roses Ensanglantees."

His villa was a gathering place for the most cultured and artistic circle in Egypt, and a distinguished group attended his funeral ceremony.
